Scilly Isles

Place: St Mary's Museum
Location: Captains chair taken from the Minnehaha which was grounded on Scilly Rock in 1910. The Minnehaha was built by Harland and Wolff and launched in 1900. On 18 April 1910 the liner grounded on rocks on Bryher in the Isles of Scilly while en route from London to New York. She remained stranded until 13 May when two tugs managed to pull her off the rocks. The cattle on board were saved by swimming them onto the island of Samson. In 1917 the Minnehaha sank within four minutes after being torpedoed by German U-boat U-48, with 43 fatalities off the Fastnet.

Place: St Mary's Museum
Location: Sideboard from the wreck of the Thomas W. Lawson a seven-masted, steel-hulled schooner used to haul coal and oil along the East Coast of the United States. She was launched in 1902 and holds the distinction of being the largest schooner and largest sailing vessel without an auxiliary engine ever built. The Thomas W. Lawson was destroyed off the uninhabited island of Annet, in the Isles of Scilly, in a storm on December 14, 1907, killing all but two of her eighteen crew and a harbor pilot already aboard. Her cargo of 58,000 barrels of light paraffin oil caused perhaps the first large marine oil spill in history.

Then look directly up , you are looking at the oriel ceiling that contains the roof boss of the pet lemur of the Courtaulds. Location: "This is the main church in the town and has a 160ft main tower. The exterior is a gargoyle hunter's heaven , with chimeras , imps , mouth pullers and tongue pokers on every aspect from rain water goods to adorning the tower ! Inside the Green man is visible on the bottom of columns supporting the roof trusses and in the ornate organ screen . I cannot put an age on the stonework , but would assume that the wood carving is early Victorian in the high gothic tradition mixed with symbolic ivy leaves and acorns."

Place: Laycock Abbey
Location: Cloister roof bosses; tomb of Sir William Sherrington
Added by Roger Vlitos 2012:
"There are a dozen or so Green men at Lacock, all carved into the ceiling of the cloisters near what was the Priest's chamber in an otherwise all female convent. Most of the Green men are in pairs or fours. Only one, near the entrance is clearly female. It may be an effigy of Ela of Salisbury, who built it and ended her days there after her husband Willian Longsword (a friend of Richard the Lion Heart) died fighting abroad. Ela had been a ward of Richard's mother Elinor of Acquitane, who spent time in Salisbury. Ela grew up in France, and and is said to have spent time at Fontrevault before marrying William and moving to Salisbury "

Sacristy: The room area where communion equipment is stored
Sedilia: Stone seats usually found on the south side of the altar
South porch: The usual entrance to a church with the tower to the west
Spandrel: The spaces between the curve of arches
Stop: see label
Transept: The ‘arm’ of a cross-shaped church. In medieval times it became necessary to increase the space near the chancel to accommodate the ever increasing quantity of clergy and choirs and so transepts were added to many churches.
Tympanum: Decorative carving around an archway
Undercroft: A vault beneath the chancel and nave (and transept if there is one)

Source References

Original sources of sightings are detailed where possible. Where those sources have been books or other Gazetteers the abbreviations for those sources are detailed below.

The English counties detailed for each individual sighting are currently being revised to show “approximately” the Ceremonial counties of England. I am sure this will be understood by anyone who has looked into the changes that have been made to the counties of England over the years. I hope that simplifying the process by using (eventually) the 48 Ceremonial Counties as per 2009 (If anyone would like to take on the task of splitting Yorkshire correctly please contact me) we will at least all be looking in the same areas. I know I will never satisfy everyone (I'd still like to use Wessex!!) but unless another less complicated solution arises……I am also using the “old counties” or “preserved counties” of Wales and the 1975-1996 “Regions” of Scotland.

I am indebted to all of the following authors for treading the trail of the green man before me. It is due to them that I became fascinated by the enigma of the green man and began my quest to create the most detailed and accurate gazetteer produced. In particular Kathleen Basford, Ronald Millar and Clive Hicks provided me with wonderful resources and fuelled what has become a lifelong passion. I am also immensely grateful to Vanessa Piggott for her wonderful work correcting existing entries and adding new sightings to our gazetteer. I would like to thank John Ibbotson for assisting with the Welsh and Scottish sections of the Gazetteer and saving me from certain madness.
